Vitarich Statement on Reports of Avian Flu in the Philippines

April 7, 2022– Recent reports have announced the presence of Avian Influenza in the Philippines, particularly in some provinces in Central Luzon. The disease is said to be currently affecting only ducks and quails.

“At Vitarich Corporation (PSE: VITA), we are committed to making sure our farms and facilities remain Avian Influenza free,” said Dr. Reynaldo D. Ortega, Senior Vice President and General Manager of Poultry, Food and Feed Sales Division.

“We recognize there are fears that the disease might extend to chickens and potentially disrupt our local food supply. As such, VITA has further heightened the implementation of our standards and is coordinating closely with appropriate authorities and experts,” Ortega added.

“Our farms undergo the strictest monitoring, testing, and enforcement of biosecurity standards regularly. These procedures guarantee well-sanitized and enclosed surroundings that prevent contamination and ensure a well-stocked inventory and continuous supply of fresh chickens for our country. We take pride in the implementation of these regular stringent measures to ensure the highest freshness, cleanliness, safety, and quality of our products at all times.”
